23. Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow:

People are seldom aware that their comfortable living depends upon the work of several thousands of persons. The first thing, for instance, almost everyone looks forward to in the morning is a hot cup of tea. This cup of tea embodies the work of thousands of people. This can be easily shown. Consider the number of things we require to prepare a cup of tea, such as clean drinking water, tea, sugar, milk, gas burner, pot, crockery, strainer, spoon and so on.

Consider first the supply of clean drinking water. In large cities this is rendered possible because of the construction of huge reservoirs of great cost and the regular maintenance of the water supply system by hundreds of workers. Tea is grown in distant plantations and made available to the consumers through a vast network employing hundreds of workers. Consider further the machinery required for sugar mill. The production of this machinery involves a long chain of processes and operation – mining of coal and iron ores, manufacture of steel and machine tools, in which thousands of workers are employed. The same argument holds good with regard to the supply of milk. The production of other items such as gas, burner, crockery, spoons, etc. requires the service of hundreds of workers.

And recall how agitated we are if the milk van is late in the morning – may be because its tyre has burst on the way. This may be due to its poor maintenance or bad condition of the roads. A good cup of tea indeed thus represents the work of several thousands of persons.

- a. What do many people crave for early in the morning?
- b. What are the things and ingredients we need to make a cup of tea?
- c. Why does the writer talk about mining of coal and iron ores, manufacture of steel and machine tools?
- d. What is the cause for delay in getting milk in the morning?
- e. 'A cup of tea represents the work of several thousands of persons.' Substantiate with your own answer.

18. Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow:

The chemistry of the oceans is changing faster than it has in hundreds of thousands of years because of the carbon dioxide being absorbed from the atmosphere; the National Research Council reported. Carbon dioxide and other industrial gases have been a concern for several years because of their impact on the air, raising global temperatures in a process called the greenhouse effect.

One factor easing that warmth has been the amount of CO₂ taken up by the oceans, but that has also caused scientific concerns because the chemicals make the water more acidic, which can affect sea life. Since the beginning of the Industrial Revolution in the 18th century, the pH of ocean water has declined from 8.2 to 8.1 and a further of 0.2 to 0.3 units is expected by the end of this century, according to the Research Council, an arm of the National Academy of Science.

The current rate of change "exceeds any known change in ocean chemistry for at least 800,000 years," the report said. As most folks will remember from school chemistry, pH is a measure of how alkaline or acidic something is. A pH of 7 is neutral, while higher numbers are more alkaline and lower numbers are more acidic. As the ocean becomes more acidic scientists have raised concern about dissolving coral reefs and potential effects of fish and other sea life.

- 1. What is the writer's concern in this text?
- 2. Why are the global temperatures raising?
- 3. Why does the writer talk about school chemistry?
- 4. What is the current pH of ocean water?
- 5. Why has the chemistry of the ocean changed?
